Workshop Description

It is well-known that music is a fantastic medium to express our feelings and reflect our inner self. Music is able to create a wonderful group atmosphere and unite the members in group counselling. However, counsellors, social workers and helping professionals find it difficult to use music in their counselling sessions because of their limited music and music therapy techniques. This course is to provide both theoretical foundation and practical techniques of music therapy for any helping professionals who are interested in applying music to enhance their group counselling quality for all ages of clients. This course does not have any musical prerequisite. We welcome all participants who are either musicians or non-musician without any musical background.
