1. Course Description

This course examines how policies of national governments are shaped by super-state institutions, such as the WTO, IMF and the World Bank, and how these are related to the current social problems in the world cities, such as poverty, income disparity, marginalization of labour, etc. It also explores the limits and possibilities of the social policies of national governments in alleviating such social problems.

2. Course Objectives

- a. To enable students to acquire critical perspectives and analytical skills about globalization;
- b. To enable students to understand the relationship between globalization, poverty and inequality;
- c. To enable students to investigate the implications of globalization for how public policy is formulated and enforced and develop critical perspective and analytical skills on global public policy;
- d. To enable students to understand and apply strategies, skills, and determinants of policy advocacy.

3. Course Outcome

After the completion of this course, students are expected to have:

- a. skills in performing literature review on policy research, in conceptualizing and operationalizing research question and in conducting secondary data analysis on statistics of national and international institutions;
- b. knowledge in policy research process and the roles and functions of NGO's policy advocacy
- c. values in concerning the livelihood and quality of life of the vulnerable groups and in advocacy of human right and social justice

4. Course format

The course will be conducted in the form of lectures as well as seminars. It will focus on selected social problems and policy issues of Hong Kong and other countries. The instructor will provide basic frameworks to understand globalization, and its impact in the first 9 lectures. In the remaining seminars, students have to form into small groups (4-5 students a group) and present their ideas and discuss topics of social problem and policy concerns. It is expected that students should take an active part in the discussions.

5. Methods of instruction

The course will employ the following methods of instruction:

- a. Lectures – The instructor will introduce relevant concepts and themes during lectures. Students are encouraged to raise their areas of concern in the lectures and participate in the discussions initiated by the instructor.
- b. Small Group Discussions – Small group discussions are occasions in which students can share and discuss relevant themes with each other and the instructor in greater depth. Instructor will also clarify relevant concepts and theories, upon the questions raised by students.
- c. Seminars – Students are required to make group presentations in three seminar. The process of preparation for the group presentation is meant for the students' consolidation of knowledge acquired from the lectures and readings and reflect their learning in the course.
- d. WebCT forum – Students are encouraged to make use of the WebCT forum to discuss relevant issues with the instructor and other students outside the classroom
- e. Readings – Students have to read the required articles stipulated for each lecture sessions. Students are also encouraged to consult other readings listed in the reference list.

- |    |                       |     |
|----|-----------------------|-----|
| 1. | Group presentation    | 40% |
| 2. | Individual Term Paper | 50% |
| 3. | Participation         | 10% |

1. Group presentation - 40% of the total assessment

Four to five students form a small group. Each group choose one topic in the three seminar sections and give a presentation of 40 minutes and lead a discussion of 15 minutes. The outline of the presentation is as follows:

- Identify and define the social problems

- Who are affected and to what extent people are affected by the problem?
  - Analyze the underlying causes and impacts of globalization and actions of the super-state institution on the problems,
  - Evaluate the limits and possibilities of action and policy of local government and global institutions to solve the problem.
2. Term Paper -50% of total assessment
Following the outline of the group presentation, each student is required to write a term paper on the topic presented or other topics mutually agreed by students and instructor. The length of the term paper should be around 4000 – 4500 words in English or 5000-6000 words in Chinese. The paper should be submitted on or before 16 December, 2011 (Friday) via WebCT system and verified by the Veriguide.
